

Christmas Programme

'The Spirit of the Circling Stars and the Human Being'

The star-filled night sky spreads out a world full of form and clarity for the observer looking upwards – and invariably wonder, stillness and then questions arise in the soul.

'Kosmos', which means as much as 'Order', is what the ancient Greeks called the world above us.

Even though no one really 'needs' the stars above us anymore since we have all the modern means of navigation equipment, they are still markers for orientation. Yet maybe their presence and activity has begun to be taken inward, so that they offer themselves for a different kind of orientation, more as inward soul experience, directing more towards an encounter with oneself.

Discovering the twelve images of the Zodiac in the heavens is only the beginning of an observation which can make a deeper, spiritual encounter possible. These heavenly pictures are not only the backdrop to our daily life, but actual portals through which specific qualities flow into our life throughout the year. Rev. Reingard Knausenberger
